CCM veteran Ray Boltz comes out of the closet and confesses he's gay

posted by Joanne Brokaw

Well, here's a shocker of a story: in an interview with the gay publication Washington Blade, CCM veteran Ray Boltz has come out of the closet and admitted that he's gay. The story, published last Friday, relates Boltz's Christian music career, his struggle with gay feelings, and his eventual confession to his family in December 2004. It's actually a really well-done story and definitely worth reading. But WOW, it's a total shocker.

For more than 20 years, Boltz has been a staple of the CCM industry, earning several certified gold albums, three Dove Awards and a string of 12 No. 1 hits. He's probably best known for the songs, "Thank You," "Watch the Lamb," "The Anchor Holds" and "I Pledge Allegiance to the Lamb."

He was married for 33 years, raised four kids, and was by all accounts a typical Christian music artist. But in 2004, he dropped a bombshell on his family when he admitted that he was gay. He'd been struggling for years with his feelings, to the point of clinical depression and thoughts of suicide. Boltz tells the Washington Blade, "I'd denied it ever since I was a kid. I became a Christian, I thought that was the way to deal with this and I prayed hard and tried for 30-some years and then at the end, I was just going, 'I'm still gay. I know I am.' And I just got to the place where I couldn't take it anymore ... when I was going through all this darkness, I thought, 'Just end this.'" He and his wife divorced – and maintain a good relationship – and Boltz has the love and support of his children. He's moved to Florida to start his life over, and tells the publication that he's dating and leading a "normal gay life." In 2007, he visited Jesus Metropolitan Community Church in Indianapolis and quietly slipped a CD and a note to the pastor. It was the first step for Boltz in going public with his news.

Ex-Christian music star Jennifer Knapp tells of coming out

Mention Jennifer Knapp to Christian music execs and they scatter.

This is the same Jennifer Knapp who made the Christian music industry several million bucks in album and ticket sales in the late '90s and early 2000s before quitting in 2002.

When she came out as gay in 2010, any chance of a comeback in the Christian music genre ended, industry execs said.

"Jennifer's an incredible woman and an incredible artist," said executive Robert Beeson, who helped launch Jars of Clay. "Do I think the Christian market will embrace (her music)? No, I don't."

Can Some Gay Men and Lesbians Change Their Sexual Orientation? 200 Participants Reporting a Change from Homosexual to Heterosexual Orientation¹

Robert L. Spitzer, M.D.^{2,3,4}

Position statements of the major mental health organizations in the United States state that there is no scientific evidence that a homosexual sexual orientation can be changed by psychotherapy, often referred to as “reparative therapy.” This study tested the hypothesis that some individuals whose sexual orientation is predominantly homosexual can, with some form of reparative therapy, become predominantly heterosexual. The participants were 200 self-selected individuals (143 males, 57 females) who reported at least some minimal change from homosexual to heterosexual orientation that lasted at least 5 years. They were interviewed by telephone, using a structured interview that assessed same sex attraction, fantasy, yearning, and overt homosexual behavior. On all measures, the year prior to the therapy was compared to the year before the interview. The majority of participants gave reports of change from a predominantly or exclusively homosexual orientation before therapy to a predominantly or exclusively heterosexual orientation in the past year. Reports of complete change were uncommon. Female participants reported significantly more change than did male participants. Either some gay men and lesbians, following reparative therapy, actually change their predominantly homosexual orientation to a predominantly heterosexual orientation or some gay men and women construct elaborate self-deceptive narratives (or even lie) in which they claim to have changed their sexual orientation, or both. For many reasons, it is concluded that the participants’ self-reports were,

Spitzer Issues Apology for Study Supporting Reparative Therapy

Mark Moran,

Despite methodological limitations, Robert Spitzer, M.D.'s, study on efficacy of reparative therapy was seized upon by ex-gay groups as evidence of the therapy's effectiveness, but was criticized as harmful to gays and lesbians.

It is the latest turn in a now 30-plus year evolution in psychiatry's understanding of homosexuality and involves a figure who has been prominent in that story throughout.

Robert L. Spitzer, M.D., is a major architect of the modern classification of mental disorders.

Alex di Suvero for The New York Times

Robert Spitzer, M.D., well known to APA members as a leader in the development of DSM, renowned as instrumental in removing homosexuality from the diagnostic manual as a disorder in 1973 and—paradoxically—the author of a deeply controversial study in the early part of the last decade suggesting that “reparative therapy” could help gay people change their sexual orientation—has now renounced the findings of that controversial study.

In a letter to the editor of the Archives of Sexual Behavior, where the study appeared in 2003, Spitzer issued a mea culpa. “I believe I owe the gay community an apology for my study making unproven claims of the efficacy of reparative therapy,” he wrote. “I also apologize to any gay

Suggestions from a parent

- What was helpful for us from other Christians?
 - Listening, not judging and not giving advice we didn't ask for.
 - Acknowledging our sorrow and asking about our daughter how is she doing, instead of acting like she is dead to us.
 - Telling us they are praying, fasting and grieving for our child.
- What Christians did that was unhelpful?
 - Giving me advices and opinions on the matter, I didn't ask for.
 - Telling me at least I have another child who is faithful to God.
 - Speaking in front of me how blessed they are because all of their children are serving the Lord.
 - Dismissing the trauma our daughter had as a child and pointing only to her sin.

Suggestions from a parent

- Don't worry about their outward appearance, but try to earn their trust and communicate about their internal struggles.
- Limit social media access and get them involved in family and church fun activities.
- Talk to them about anything: sex, LGBTQ issues, dating etc. Don't shy away from difficult conversations and don't be shocked when they share stories and opinions with you.
- If things are going bad for them-get them into Christian counseling before they are 18 and explore a possible trauma in their lives. .
- Take care of your mental health too.
- Find a support group.
- Pray and fast about your child and give them back to God-He is their ultimate parent.

Suggestions from a parent

- We have experienced deep trauma, loss and guilt. Listen and mourn with us. Help us to heal mentally, emotionally and spiritually.
- Acknowledge our trauma and help us to heal.
- Tell us it was not our fault.
- Give us some practical advice when we ask for it.
- Educate other people about trans issues, so they will not go through what we are going through, and we would feel that our suffering is not meaningless.
- Give us hope for the future.
